Ms. Zhao earned her Bachelor's of Law degree in 2007 from East China University of Political Science and Law (ECUPL), majoring in International Law. At the same time, she was selected to receive Shanghai's Citywide Award for excellent scholarship. Her undergraduate thesis was "Application of the Renvoi in the Foreign-Related Civil Relationship of China" and was published in the Economic Research Herald. While at ECUPL, Ms. Zhao was a member of Administration Committee for the Student Groups and also served as a teaching assistant. Ms. Zhao speaks Chinese, English, and some Japanese.

Ms. Zhao is currently pursuing an LL.M. in International Law at ECUPL Graduate School and was granted a scholarship for two academic years. She is also currently an exchange student at Chicago-Kent College of Law with a tuition scholarship where she is concurrently pursuing an LL.M in Financial Service law at Chicago-Kent.

Ms. Zhao completed internships within the judiciary and a law firm during her summer and winter vacations in college. She interned at the People's Court of Putuo District in Shanghai and received civil procedure practice in court recording and in writing legal documents. Ms. Zhao also interned at Shanghai Hongqi Law Firm and worked on actual cases related to finance. During the internship at the Hongqi Law Firm, she was able to apply her academic training while developing a more direct and practical understanding of financial law and procedures. Ms. Zhao was also honored to be selected for the School Excellence Award for internship performance at East China University of Political Science and Law (ECUPL) in 2006.

During Ms. Zhao's third undergraduate academic year, when the military recruited at ECUPL, she volunteered and had enlisted in the military for two years. When her military service ended, Ms. Zhao was granted an Excellent Award for military Performance and a Medal Award for excellent leadership as a squad leader.
